This company is seeking new franchisees in the following international regions: Canada. Definition: The initial fee paid to a franchisor to join their system. What you need to know: Found in Item 5 of the FDD, this may be a flat fee, or may vary based on territory size, experience, or other factors. The franchise fee is an up-front one-time cost that a new franchisee pays to the franchisor. This fee is usually due at the signing of the franchise agreement and covers the right to use the franchisor's trademarks, name, and related business systems. Definition: The total amount necessary to begin operation of the franchise. What you need to know: The initial investment includes the franchise fee, along with other startup expenses such as real estate, equipment, supplies, business licenses, and working capital. This is outlined in a chart in Item 7 of the FDD, showing a range of possible costs from low to high. Definition: The minimum net worth you must have in order to qualify to become a franchisee of this company. What you need to know: Net worth is the value of a person's assets minus liabilities. Assets include cash, stocks, retirement accounts, and real estate. Liabilities include items like mortgages, car payments, and credit card debt. Definition: The minimum liquid capital you must have available in order to qualify to become a franchisee of this company. Definition: A discount or other incentive offered to military veterans who buy a franchise with this company. Definition: The length of time your franchise agreement will last. What you need to know: Franchise terms are typically anywhere from 5 to 20 years in length, but are sometimes instead dependent on factors such as the term of your lease. Once your term is up, you may have the option to renew your agreement, typically for a smaller fee than the original franchise fee. Are you unsure which franchise is right for you? Some franchisors offer in-house financing, while others have relationships with third-party financing sources to which they refer qualified franchisees. Franchisors offer initial training programs and a variety of ongoing support options to help franchisees run their businesses. Additional details about running this franchise. Definition: Absentee ownership means that the franchisee does not actively work in the franchise business or manage day-to-day operations. Definition: An exclusive territory is a fixed area in which you are given the right to operate and in which no other units of the same franchise may be opened. What you need to know: Territory size may be based on factors such as radius, population size, zip codes, and more. Details can be found in Item 12 of the FDD. Great pay and benefits, poor management. The compensation and benefits are great but communication between different departments as well as interdepartmentally is abysmal and management is seriously lacking in many different areas in many different departments. Pay and benefits. Poor management, poor communication, no breaks aside from lunch. Was this review helpful? Yes No. Report Share Tweet. Copy link. Chasing my money. A lot of responsibility No two days are alike Making the sales is a great feeling. Being outside as a mobil tool salesman has its perks. It sure beats sitting behind a desk. Disrespectful management. If you want to be used and abused this is the place for you there turnover rate for employees is very high most people there last 3yr at most if have a chance search for something better. They suck. They pick and choose butt kissers and a lot of drugs go on there this place is not a place to work I have nothing good to say about this place So if u want to be treated badly and get used for nothing and get nothing go work there. Yes 2 No. Close relationship with other distributors. My husband and I were independent distributors. We owned our own truck and had control of our own destiny. Getting to know and develop very close relationships with other independent distributors and their families, that we have maintained over the last 18 years, has been very rewarding. Yes 1 No. Share your experience. Let job seekers know what it's like to work at your company. Let go one week before Christmas. I had been working at Matco a little over a month as a warranty returns associate. I was let go unexpectedly last Monday almost a week before Christmas. I felt I was doing well. They never posted any kind of productivity numbers and nothing was ever said to me so I assumed I was hitting all the metrics. I had no idea I was lacking until I received the call from my employment agency to not come back. Yes 3 No. It was a job. If management acted like they cared more about their people, they probably would keep more of their workers. I learned a lot but would like to have learned a little more. I would like to of been more involved in the whole process and maybe been able to learn assembly. Cool people. Long drive to work. Yes 1 No 5. Decent job have to be self motivated. Best part of the job was satisfying my customers needs. The hardest part of the job was trying to collect money owed and go after bad debt. Yes 5 No 1. Jobs at Matco Tools. Help Desk Representative. Systems Administrator II. Ready to apply? Get help updating your resume through Indeed. The place is a miss managed disaster. Never work here. The drama and gossip from co workers and management is harder than the job itself. Management always makes promises they don't keep. Management treats you as a bottom feeder not a human being. Yes 6 No 1. Good company. It's up to you on what you make. How willing you are to work hard and be vocal and how good you are in sales. Vacation incentives and alot of expos and discounts. Health care. Yes 2 No 1. Very unhappy and rude employees,no breaks in 4 hour intervals. I was disappointed to know there were no breaks 4 hours walking in cement and dirty envirement. Employees are rude and hate there jobs. They look stressed out constantly. Yes 1 No 2. Not a good place to work. Very very poor management. You get treated like a dog and nothings ever good enough. On top of being forced to work 60 hours a week. If you wanna be treated like your in grade school come work here. Yes 3 No 1. Yes 5 No 2. Competitive Fast Pace. Everyone got along real well. Team work environment is great. Inventory has to be the busiest time period. Lack of Communication. I was excited to come and work for Matco as a trainer, however due to lack of job training and miscommunication with people who should have done a better job at it, i left the company due to my aggravation, and things said because of it. Even though i had 17 years of experience, when I asked questions to my coworkers, it was taken as questioning Matco instead of being taken as a possible fix to a bad thing. While performing a survey technician head count in a territory we were going into places that a person should never go, for the sake of going, this would translate to a distributor going there and doing zero business or worse, losing money and eventually failing. This is how they found your territory as a distributor btw When i questioned this, i was again reprimanded. During new distributor training, we covered in detail a computer system that will be changed soon, and it was covered in detail, however; how to sell or skill on how to sell were hardly covered, and when they were? This is who you will be trained by, just FYI. If you have an experienced co-worker, and you have some background already, you may make it. Otherwise, you will not From my prior tool work experience, i was looking forward to helping with this problem, but apparently they didn't want it. Good Luck in your choice Management pay, benefits, expenses. Overcomplicate the simple things, they seem to listen but they don't. Dislike change. Yes 10 No. I would not waste your money starting a franchise. They change the game on you in the middle of your business. Yes 11 No. One of the worst. Poor leadership. Set in their ways, despite claiming continuous improvement. Yes 9 No 2. Good company to work with, Good franchise good opertunities, Just make sure you have good insurance on your tool truck when it catches fire, Some lessons are learned the hard way. Yes 5 No. Great company Great Fellow Distributors, You get what you put into it. Typical Day at work is very relaxed work at your own pace but important to stay busy to visit every shop and customer on your route. Other distributors are very willing to help you out. District manager is always a phone call away to provide assistance. There is a lot of competition in this field and success comes with building trust and relationships with each of your customers. Company has some fun company outings and training. You are your own boss. Yes 11 No 1. Find another company.
